DOLLY DIMPLE FINDS THE COW WITH THE CRUMPLED HORN

"Real" cape Holly. "As seen as you're born, there's the cow with the crumpled born.
That towns the dog that worried the cat." "I'll run," says the doll. "No fear of that!"

"No need to run," says a pleasant voice. "You can safely stay, if that's your choice— For I'm the maiden all furiors that milks the cow with the crumpled born."

"And I," a voice says, "I'll be sworn that I'm the man all tattered and torn.
That kissed the maiden all forlors that milked the cow with the crumpled hors.

The now will give you milk to drink and let you ride on her back: you'll think It family, your wanting to run-for now you're not afraid of the crimples com."

"It's very good of Mister Cow," says Dolly Dimple. "Please tell me haw You get along so well-for I of gives and things am rather sky."

"Well, cows and things," says Tettered and Torn, "of paw or claw or houf or home.

Act very much as humans do: He good to then, and they're good to you."
